Pay Cuts Promise Still More WPA Discord When Wage Differential Is Abolished September 1

WASHINGTON — The WPA authorities are saying privately that if you think they are having trouble now, with nation-wide strikes against the abolition of the "prevailing wage" rule for relief work, you should just try looking ahead to next September. Then, they say, is when the real trouble is likely to begin.

Science Ready to "Shoot" Mars at Its Closest Range

July 27 Will Find Planet "Only 36 Million Miles Away"

ARE THEY CANALS?

Science Once More Will Seek Explanation of Mars' Straight Lines

By NEA Service

Science is aiming its "heavy artillery" right smack at Mars this month—and waiting. Only the weapons are not cannon, but telescopes. And Mars is not the threatening symbol of war, but the planet.

Science believes in "firing" when you see the whites of their eyes. On July 27, Mars will be "looking" at the earth from a distance of no more than 36,000,000 miles.

Astronomically speaking, that's about as far as the house across the street. Mars hasn't come as close since 1924. Won't approach as near again for many years. Sometimes the planet is 248,000,000 miles distant; was almost that in June, 1924, in fact.

It all happens like this. Mars and the earth travel about the sun in different orbits at different speeds. Sometimes Mars is on the other side of the sun from the earth; often it's off at an angle. But, in late July, the earth will be directly between Mars and the sun.

Chance for Research

Astronomy's armies don't plan a military expedition to Mars, they just want to look at it. They are the public not to lose sleep over a Martian invasion like that in last year's Orson Welles "horror broadcast." In the first place, they don't even know whether Mars is inhabited.

Secondly, although light will travel from Mars to the earth in 193 seconds as the worlds approach each other, it would take a rocket-ship much longer. Nearness of the planet, however, may enable scientists to make new discoveries with their long-range lenses and photographic plates. They'd like to know more about the planet's geographic makeup, get a better look at those canals discovered by Giovanni Schiaparelli in 1877.

To earth-dwellers, Mars is a huge star which shines with a red glow. But let's take a look at it as you would at the receiving end of a telescope.

Now the color is a deep orange. At one end is an elliptical, yellowish area—one of the polar ice caps which grow and diminish with the seasons. Summer is approaching in Mars now, shrinking the northern ice cap, leaving the southern cap predominant.

A bluish green, elongated patch starts just beyond the ice cap and continues to the equator. There is a smaller patch near the equator. Belief is that these are areas of vegetation. The rest of the planet is probably desert, accounting for the reddish hue.

Apparently melting ice and snows of the polar caps provide the lone source of water. It seems logical that moisture from the caps should roll down over the planet, reviving vegetation.

Canals Man-Made?

But about those canals—some scientists even deny their existence. In 1924, however, astronomers did sight some fine lines, forming a sort of network on Mars.

Because most of these lines do not bend, like a river, but follow a rather straight course, the late Percival Lowell contended that they were canals constructed by living beings and nature for providing necessary irrigation throughout the planet.

If there is life on Mars, the inhabitants must be much different than we are. Living conditions would resemble those in our stratosphere, 18 miles above the earth's surface. It's much colder up there; temperature at the equator rarely rises above 50.

By and large, Mars is still quite a mystery. That's why science is so eager for the "visit."

Roosevelt and Hull Confronting on Rebuff by the Senate

WASHINGTON —(AP)— President Roosevelt indicated Friday he might make some announcement on a neutrality legislation during the afternoon.

He told his press conference there was no news as yet, but he expected to confer about noon with Secretary Hull, and there might be some news time thereafter.

BAILEY BOND SPEECH

Thomas to Submit Plans for Legion Building in Hope

Will Offer Four Plans for Approval at Meeting Within Few Days

'COMMUNITY CENTER' New Legion Building Would Serve Various City, County Groups

Further plans for construction of an American Legion building at Fair Park to be used as a "community center" by various civic organizations, women's club meetings, public gatherings and recreational activities were discussed by a group of legionnaires and business men at a meeting Thursday night at the home of T. S. Cornelius, general chairman of the building program.

C. O. Thomas was appointed chairman of a committee to draw up four plans of the proposed building and to submit these plans for approval by legionnaires and other persons at a meeting to be held within the next two or three weeks. Date of the meeting will be announced in the press.

It was the opinion of the group that the building would be constructed of material—other than logs. The log-type construction was voted down. A building that would stand for years to come is the type of building desired.

Following the approval of plans for the type of building wanted, it was decided that a county-wide financial campaign would be launched in an effort to complete the building as soon as possible.

Weaver Makes Appeal

Cecil Weaver, outgoing post commander, appealed for the moral support of every business, social and civic organization in Hope and Hempstead county.

"We want this building to be the meeting place of every worthwhile organization in the city and county. We have needed such a community center for years," Mr. Weaver said.

R. C. Ellen told of campaigns for the construction of legion buildings at Wynne and at Camden, where he formerly resided before moving to Hope. "In Camden, everything is held at the hut, including women's club meetings, various kinds of entertainment, dances, public meetings, conventions and other gatherings. The legion building at Camden was largely built through a public subscription campaign."

The building has been cleared of debt—and now has a monthly income of more than $200 through these various gatherings and social functions held in the building.

"The legion building at Wynne was also built largely through a county-wide subscription campaign. Legion."

Subsidy Likely on Cotton Exports, in Spite of Textiles

Textile Industry Fears Cheap Cotton Will Come Back as Goods

PLEDGE IT WON'T Administration Guarantees to Increase Quota Limitations

WASHINGTON —(AP)— Federal farm officials went ahead Friday with plans to subsidize exports of cotton despite the almost unanimous opposition of the cotton trade and textile organizations.

Representatives of the cotton industry told officials at a closed conference Thursday they were opposed to the plan, designed to help the United States regain her lost foreign markets, but they offered, however, to co-operate to make it as "effective as possible."

Trade Opposes Plan

WASHINGTON —(AP)— Representatives of the cotton industry voiced sharp opposition Thursday to the administration's plan to subsidize cotton exports, but offered to co-operate to make the proposal effective if the government insisted on putting it into effect.

Secretary Wallace, at a conference with the representatives said that "the interest of the cotton belt and the entire nation" required adoption of such a scheme to help the United States regain and maintain its "fair share" of world markets.

By paying a bounty on cotton shipped abroad, officials intend to increase exports from an estimated 3,400,000 bales this season—the smallest in 60 years—to at least 6,000,000 bales during the season opening August 1.

Wallace said that the government's policy of making loans on cotton, while maintaining the domestic price of the crop above world levels, has had the effect of "impounding large supplies and restricting the free flow of cotton into export."

Import Quotas

W. L. Clayton, Houston Tex., one of the nation's big cotton exporters, declared the American Cotton Shippers Association opposes the subsidy but is willing to co-operate to make the program effective if officials insist upon putting it into operation.

Frank Morrison, representing the Cotton Textile Institute, expressed hope that Secretary Wallace would "change his mind" regarding the subsidy. He urged that if the program was adopted, steps would be taken to prevent foreign textile manufacturers from sending increased imports to this country. Under the subsidy plan, foreign mills would be able to buy American cotton more cheaply than domestic mills.

It was pointed out that steps would be taken to impose import quotas on foreign textile goods to protect domestic manufacturers.

As Soon as Possible

It was generally agreed that the subsidy plan should be put into effect as soon as possible to prevent any further disturbance of the markets and shipping operations. Most representatives agreed that the rate should

Couple Are Held in "Suspense" for Five Hours

Mr. and Mrs. J. C. Rathborne, socialites of Old Westbury, L. I., hung around for a thrill at the New York World's Fair longer than they expected when, after they "bailed out" from atop the 250-foot Parachute Jump, their chute stuck 100 feet above ground. At left, above, arrow indicates the couple, marooned aloft for five hours before rescue squads freed the jammed guide wires. From a chute next to them, a policeman and a friend shout encouragement. At right, the Rathbornes smile happily as the end of their literal "suspense" approaches.

These tense faces typify the anxiety with which 10,000 spectators kept a five-hour vigil until Mr. and Mrs. J. C. Rathborne were rescued from a captive parachute, stuck high in the air over the New York World's Fair.

BANKERS BACK HIM Governor Claims Support of 100 Leading Banking Institutions

LITTLE ROCK —(AP)— Governor Bailey told the General Assembly convened in special session Friday that if it "emasculated" or rejected the 140-million-dollar highway bond refunding program the destiny of Arkansas is "drab indeed, and you have assumed a fearful responsibility."

Stressing throughout his 4,000-word address the importance of making highway construction funds available through successful refunding, Bailey said:

"Turn to the Right"

If you take the road to the right and adopt this plan, here (Arkansas) destiny is one of a great commonwealth with a happy and prosperous people who may with optimism look forward to a state per capita wealth comparable with that of other states, and with a per capita income equal to or exceeding the national average."

Bailey summarized the benefits of his proposed program as follows:

"A 39-million-dollar mortgage on lands in road improvement districts will be extinguished.

"Savings of not less than 15 millions in interest payments will be made.

"A 5-million-dollar-per-year state highway construction program will be inaugurated.

"Continued aid to road-improvement districts and bridge-improvement districts will be assured.

Aid for Cities

"The possibility of aid to town and city streets will be enhanced.

"It will be possible to eliminate the two remaining toll bridges (Des Ar and Powhatan) sooner than otherwise.

"Greater aid for farm-to-market roads will be made possible.

"More than 100 of the nation's leading financial institutions will engage in a campaign favorably advertising Arkansas, supporting optimistic statements about it with the investment of more than 140 million dollars.

"The use of the state's credit again will be available not only to use but to future generations. The state's credit is the measure of its respectability, and is more valuable than cash."

Strike Forbidden Against the U.S.A.

Strike of WPA Is Strike Against Government, Says F. D.

WASHINGTON — President Roosevelt said Friday there could not be strikes against the government, and the WPA strike was such an action.

"You can not strike against the government," Roosevelt said, later sending out word to newsmen who attended his press conference that the phrase could be quoted directly.

This permission apparently was designed to emphasize the president's views toward the wide-spread WPA strikes.

51 Fired in State

LITTLE ROCK — Of 51, skilled workers who failed to report to work on Arkansas Works Projects Administration jobs under the new federal work relief regulations, 19 have been dismissed because of five days' absence from work. H. C. Baker, deputy administrator, said Thursday.

Mr. Baker said several may have failed to report for work for reasons other than objects to the law's requirement for 150 hours of work monthly at a "security wage." Instead of receiving the hourly rates prevailing for similar private employment.

No organized opposition to the regulations has appeared. Mr. Baker said. He said that six workers of the 51 had returned to work.

The Arkansas Federation of Labor is studying the efforts of American Federation officials to secure the restoration of the prevailing wage to Thackrey said. Mr. Thackrey said few members of A. F. of L. locals were on the WPA rolls in Arkansas.

Mars Nearest Earth July 27

White elliptical area at top is polar ice cap. Black indicates likely areas of vegetation; balance is probably desert. Narrow lines, visible when Mars came close to earth in 1924, may be canals which carry water over planet's surface.

Poll Tax Deadline Set for October 1

So Penalty for Assessing If This Is Done by October 1

Under Act 82 of the legislature of the 1939 session, if you wish to vote in the gubernatorial and other state and county elections in August 1940, you must pay your poll tax on or before October 1, 1939.

In the past your poll tax was payable on or before June 15th and you would necessarily have to pay a penalty to assess if you had not assessed the previous year. The new act provides that you can now assess your poll tax up to and including October 1, 1939, this year (1939) without any penalty and pay your poll tax in order that you may vote in the state and county elections to be held in August 1940.

Any person in this state who has not assessed and paid his or her poll tax this year can go to the assessor's office, assess without penalty and get a poll tax. This is vitally important for the reason that heretofore taxpayers would pay their poll taxes the same year in which the elections were held but now the time for paying poll taxes expires each year on October 1 and in this year, 1939, every one can assess without a penalty on or before October 1 and pay their poll tax which cost them only $1.00 and must not wait until 1940, otherwise, they will not be entitled to vote in the state and county elections in August, 1940.

"Mr. O'Neal didn't get a scratch. He continued on to New Orleans, came back to Hope last night and is gone somewhere again today.

"The car is battered up a little, but he's still driving it—and he didn't get hurt," the company employee emphasized.

Man Still a Hunter and a Killer

Man is still a hunter. In the days when he was a shaggy brute-man crouched in a smoky cave, he was a hunter because he had to be.

Man was both hunter and hunted in those days. Only because he was the best hunter among all the animal kingdom did he survive.

The necessity for hunting as a means of existence has disappeared in all civilized places. But man is a hunter still. The instinct which led him to trap and kill the great mammoth, the shrill cry of triumph at the kill, lie deep within him still.

Sometimes, in the most unexpected ways, the old instinct rises to the surface, takes possession of even civilized man. That is atavism.

And when the laws and customs of civilized society decree a hunt, when the bare protection of each other's lives demand that a danger be hunted down and eliminated, men join the hunt today with a certain grim pleasure and excitement that reflects a forgotten past.

Study these pictures. In one, men have banded together to hunt down and kill deer, simply for their pleasure. Their satisfaction with their quarry, their pride in their weapons, is easily seen in the pose they have assumed.

In the other picture you see the same satisfaction in their quarry, the same pride in their weapons, almost the same pose.

This, too, was a hunt. But the quarry this time was a man. He was Ray Olson, desperate killer of two Wisconsin deputy sheriffs. He was hunted down exactly as a lion or a bear is hunted to his death.

Olson had done murder. He had resisted capture in such a way as to make capture impossible except at imminent risk of death to the pursuers. He was too dangerous to be allowed at large, more dangerous than the gentle deer.

The inhibitions of civilization were released. The hunt was on.

At its end a man lay dead, triumphant deer rifles popped across his carcass exactly as though he had been a deer.

Unconsciously, the hunters assumed for the camera a pose that showed how strongly, when necessity removes restraint, the caveman hunter crops up in man, today.

This is the primitive soul that sleeps restlessly beneath the surface of every one of us, waiting only the liberation that comes with emergency, danger, or war to call it howling forth.

Chiggers Seldom Actually Burrow Under the Skin as Many Believe

Frequently people on vacations spoil most of their fun and are unable to get any rest because they are bitten by an annoying little parasite commonly called chigger. They are also known as harvest mites. In Mexico they are known as red bugs or bete rouge. The scientists call them Trombicula irritans.

The larvae or chigger mites attach themselves to the skin by means of their hooked projections. This sets up a severe irritation of the skin with intolerable itching. A few hours after the chigger first catches hold, there is a burning sensation which changes to severe itching within 36 hours. Red blotches appear, and then water blisters form in these blotches.

In most places chigger bites occur during the late summer and early fall among people who have been walking through woods and shrubbery.

There seems to be some difference among scientists as to whether or not chiggers penetrate the skin. Some insist that the chiggers burrow into the skin and die. One expert permitted himself to be attacked by chiggers and observed them daily, using a microscope. He found that on the first day the chiggers attach themselves only by their mouth parts and do not burrow into the skin. In the northeastern part of the United States chiggers show a tendency to attach themselves at the hair follicles of the skin and actually try to enter, but cannot get into the skin because of the very small size of the hair follicle in comparison to the size of the chigger. A chigger cannot get into the skin unless the pores are greatly dilated.

Apparently the chiggers live during the winter on the skins of birds and animals, particularly the ears of the rabbit.

In foreign countries some of the parasites of the type of the chigger are capable of carrying disease, particularly in Japan, where they carry a condition called tsutsugamushi fever.

The itching of chigger bites may be relieved by any of the ordinary lotions

HIGHLIGHTS FROM LATEST BOOKS

A CRIMINAL TRAPS HIMSELF

The development of a law-abiding London barber into a thief and ultimately a cold-blooded killer is skillfully recounted in F. L. Green's novel "On the Night of the Fire" (Macmillan; $2). The following quotation shows the mental conflict marking the beginning of the metamorphosis.

All the foolish fire and flash passed from his mind, and he accepted his defeat and was ready to admit whatever fact opened before him.

From that moment a kind of fatalism grew in him. In his heart, where before there had always been a tempest of envy, bravado, pride and ambition, there was now only a calm and a desire for rest. . . .

He believed firmly that at any moment the police would enter with a warrant for his arrest. He was ready. . . . The delay made him impatient. He found himself actually anticipating with relief the imminent moment when the door would open. He wondered what the police would say. He tried to imagine the effect of his arrest upon the people in the ward. The excitement, the secret satisfaction that the murderer was under arrest, the surprise. It occurred to him then that they might not be coming after all. The idea was like a spark amidst ashes. It took light. It obsessed him, making his fingers move into all manner of hopeful flights which always ended in uncertainty and tension. . . .

The police were not coming. They would never come! There was no evidence to prove what he had done! . . .

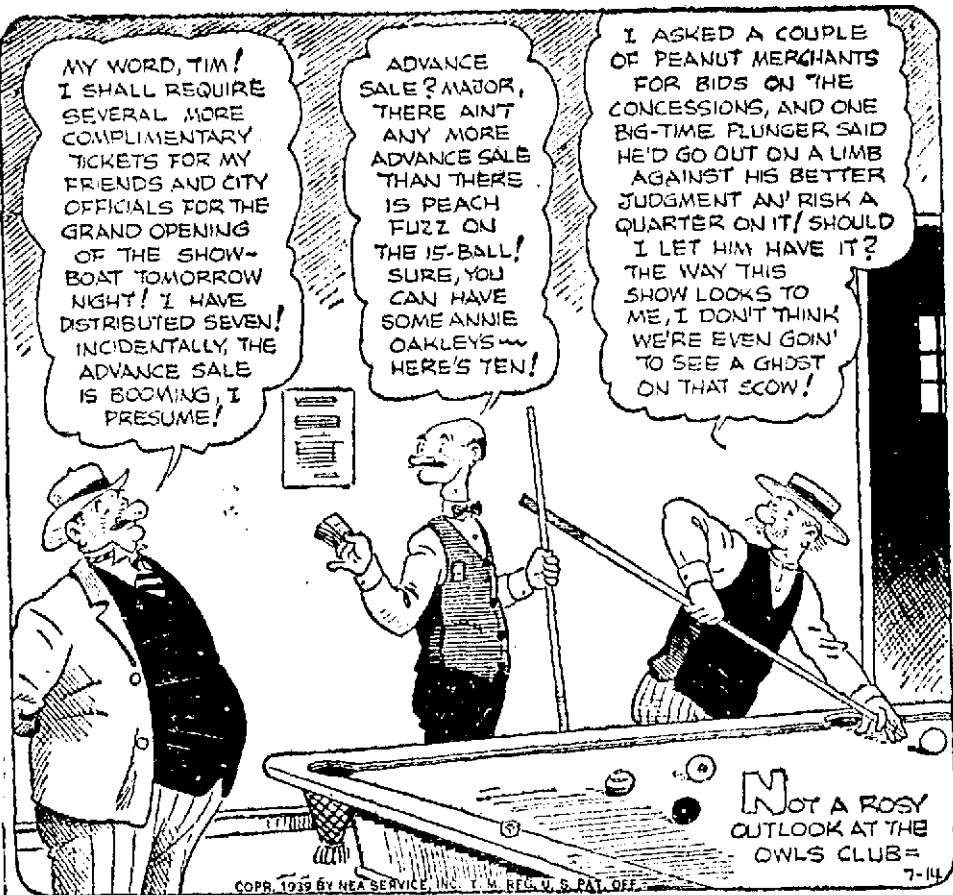

Hope began to return steadily to him. His empty heart welcomed it hungrily, and it seemed to him that in the darkness which obscured his future there was a promise of light, as yet distant and uncertain, but none the less feasible.

So They Say

Our congressmen don't seem to realize that foreign commerce is built on credit. If only one country has the world's credit of gold . . . the result is bound to be continued stagnation. W. G. Schoepfmyer, export manager, N. Y. Export Managers' Club.

The Golden Side

There's nunny a rest on the road of life.
If we only would stop to take it;
And many a time from the better land,
If the querulous heart would wake it.
To the sunny soul that is full of hope,
And whose beautiful trust ne'er fail-eth.
The grass is green and the flowers are bright,
Though the wintry storm prevailed.
Better to hope though the clouds hang low,
And to keep the eyes still lifted;
For the sweet blue sky will soon peep through,
And the ominous clouds are rifted.
There was never a night without a day,
Nor an evening without a morning;
And the darkest hour, the proverb goes,

A Man Who Made a Foolish Choice
Text: 1 Kings 12:1-5, 12-17, 20

By WILLIAM E. GILROY, D. D., Editor of Advance

Israel, which has given to the world the best of its religion, is the source also of the best of its politics. It is interesting to see the extent to which democracy, which we might regard as a modern thing, roots back into the Old Testament and into the life of the Jewish people.

The first king, Saul, was approved of the people, and future kings had also to have this approval. There are many indications in the Old Testament story that the people were jealous of their rights and liberties. Solomon had had a glorious reign, but much of the glory had been based in heavy burdens upon the people of taxation and enforced labor. Now, when Solomon was gone and his son, Reh-

Winter Cover Crops Serve Dual Purpose, Enrich the Soil and Control Erosion

An integral part of a complete and coordinated soil and water conservation farming system is the use of winter cover crops to protect cultivated land from the erosive action of heavy winter and early spring rains that occur when clean-tiled crops do not occupy the fields.

The growing of winter cover crops is one phase of the program of the Terre Rouge-Budew Soil Conservation District, the Mine Creek District at Nashville and the Soil Conservation Service project and CCC Camp at Hope which will be hosts at a field day at the camp Tuesday, July 25. More than 5,000 farmers, business men and members of their families are expected to hear Dr. H. H. Bennet, chief of the Soil Conservation Service, Washington, D. C., speak at 2 p. m. that day.

The upper picture shows vetch as it is grown on some Arkansas farms during the winter and early spring. This and other legumes serve the dual purpose of controlling erosion and enriching the soil. Farmers using these leguminous crops find that they make possible increases in yields of crops that follow. Legumes while growing add nitrogen to the soil. When turned under green, they add organic matter which improves the water absorbing and holding ability of the soil.

The lower picture shows an exceptionally fine crop of sorghum growing on the same field shown in the upper picture. Vetch made eight tons of green matter per acre, all of which was turned under for soil improvement.

SERIAL STORY GHOST DETOUR

BY OREN ARNOLD
COPYRIGHT, 1939, NEA SERVICE, INC.

Yesterday's Assassins send the report of the rich gold values at Goldcrest to the mining company by mistake and the company agrees to buy the town back, but then, then Roselee rushes out, crying for Dick after the mining men leave.

CHAPTER VIII

ALTHOUGH efficient Mrs. Hogan had established Dick and Franklin comfortably in bunks down the street in the Grand Central barber shop (called Tonsorial Parlor on its sign) Dick had never yet slept there.

"Listen, Frank," he had told his friend that first night, "just don't bother to mention it to the girls, because they'll be jittery, but I'm gonna camp up there in the bank. I've got this light canvas cot. It folds up easily, and these nights are warm so that I don't need a lot of cover. I'll just flop inside the teller's cage and be at anybody that might happen in. See?"

"I see. I sure do see! Have you got a gun?"

"I have a pistol. It belonged to our football coach; the timers used it in games, remember. But it shoots real 38's as well as blanks. I got two boxes of shells."

"Load it and keep it handy, and I'll take turns with you sleeping up there."

"No. Nope, Frank, I'd rather lay for that robber myself. I outweigh you by 50 pounds. I could bear-hug him to death if need be."

"Not!"

"Yes! I'm sure I recognized him as the same man. Whatever will we do?"

"Um. Nothing we can do but lay low and wait. And listen, Roselee—don't you lose any sleep about it, see? I'm hired to do the worrying. My 200 pounds can worry better than your 100."

"I weigh 119, Richard Bancroft, so there!"

He grinned. "Scram, small fry. I got work to do."

But he didn't take it as lightly as he pretended to. He did resume normal work, but he kept thinking about what she said. He thought about it again that night, and next day, and on the second night he made up his mind he should take a precaution. The burlap sack in the vault now was a dummy, all right, but five people, including Mrs. Hogan, knew where the real money sack was. It occurred to Dick that this was an unhealthy situation. Franklin had gone in to flag-staff on business for the night, and so he had nobody to consult. But presently the young man made up his mind to take action alone.

ROSELEE DALE told herself that she had never seen a group of customers as enthusiastic as this one she guided now. She had 20 men and women in tow, leading them through the old Bucket of Blood saloon, the Hummingbird Bar and Gambling Emporium (strangely contrasting names!) with its furo tables and chairs still there, the Twentieth Century Club which was just another barroom with famous nudes on its walls, the several "Gent. Mdse." stores, Pry's Photo Gallery (with a lot of old negatives and prints still there), McGonigle's Saddlery, the Goldcrest Hardware and Mining Machinery Company warehouse, the Goldcrest City Bank (front part only), five or six residences, the Mohave Opera House, these and several more picturesque relics of yesteryear's prosperity. She gave her little talk and answered questions in each place, and steered them finally to Mrs. Hogan's refreshment and souvenir counter in the Ace High Hotel.

"I thought there was an old jail up here, dug back in a mountain," one man mentioned, there in the Ace High. "I'd heard about that. A sort of dungeon for their tough criminals."

help to make it safe and clean enough to bring guests in."

They were interrupted then by other guests who wanted to talk, so that she forgot the matter until the following evening after supper when she was alone in her room with Christine. Counting money and comparing mental notes on the day's activity, Roselee remembered what the tourist had said. She also saw a note on her work calendar, reminding her to look into the dungeon matter this night.

"We simply must prepare it for show, Christy," Roselee declared. "People are asking about it. Maybe we can get the Indian men and the two old cowboys—they're dears!—to help with the work there."

"Let's go look at it now and plan what to do," Christine said. When they got outside, though, they discovered a fragile filament of light, curved and beautiful, etched in the green-black sky just above Squaw Mountain to the east. Christine began humming, then singing in low tone.

"In June, with you, in a canyon, under the moon, to-tum-tum-tee."

"Silly!" said Roselee. "Getting romantic?"

"Let's sit a while and watch it rise, Roselee. We'll rest only one-half hour. I promise."

Potato With Bermuda Grass Growing in It Is Brought to Hope

An Irish potato, with Bermuda grass growing through it, was brought to Hope Star Thursday by D. E. Evans, employee of the Southern Ice company. Mr. Evans said the potato was grown on the J. C. New Nevada 'Gold Rush' on--Moneyed Men Stake Homestead Claims in Tax Paradise

By BILLY BERRY
NEA Service Special Correspondent
RENO, Nev. — Nevada is rapidly becoming the Retreat of the Rich, the Sanctuary of the Solvent.

Tax-tired tycoons, naturally drawn to a state that has no income tax, no gift tax, and a tax on intangibles which is not collected are flocking to make Nevada their legal home. Newcomers from states where the tax collector is tougher have brought near-cyclone-cellar of capital.

This completes a cycle for Nevada. It first found fame when eager immigrants found the rich silver lodes, and those who entered the state penniless left it with bulging pockets. Then came the next immigrant wave, seeking freedom from irksome marriage ties, and taking pleasant facilities for divorce.

And now comes a third wave of men who have made money elsewhere bringing back some measures of the wealth that once came out of the fabulous Comstock Lode.

Yearly Surplus
This will show how the golden tide is running into Nevada: People with incomes above $5000 a year fill out income tax form 1040. In 1932 Nevada had 609 such people. In 1937, she had 2185. That means that at least 1576 people with comfortable-or-better incomes were drawn to Nevada by its "no income, inheritance, sales, gift, or intangible tax" program.

Nevada is nevertheless solvent, with a treasury surplus and a balanced budget.
How? It done? Nevada is in many respects unique. Its population has only recently crossed the 100,000 mark—it is the most thinly-populated of all states. There is almost no manufacturing, and since mining and ranching are the big industries unemployment is not the problem that it is in most states. The divorce and gambling laws are such as to permit collection of big revenue by the state and by cities like Reno.

Since 1935, annual surplus of the state have run between $300,000 and $500,000. Its bonded debt is under a million dollars, and even that is held by the state itself in various trust funds. The state constitution throws rigid restrictions around the accumulation of debt.

Twelve years ago the new trek began. Ralph Elsmann, Brooklyn, N. Y., utilities magnate, is usually awarded the title in Nevada of being the Columbus of the tax Eldorado. He ran into marital difficulties, and went to Nevada for a divorce.

But instead of going back to Brooklyn afterward, as most of the Nevada divorce customers do, Elsmann looked about him at the moderate climate, the scenic beauties, and the tax-free delights. He decided to stay, and built himself a $300,000 home in the Washoe Valley near Reno.

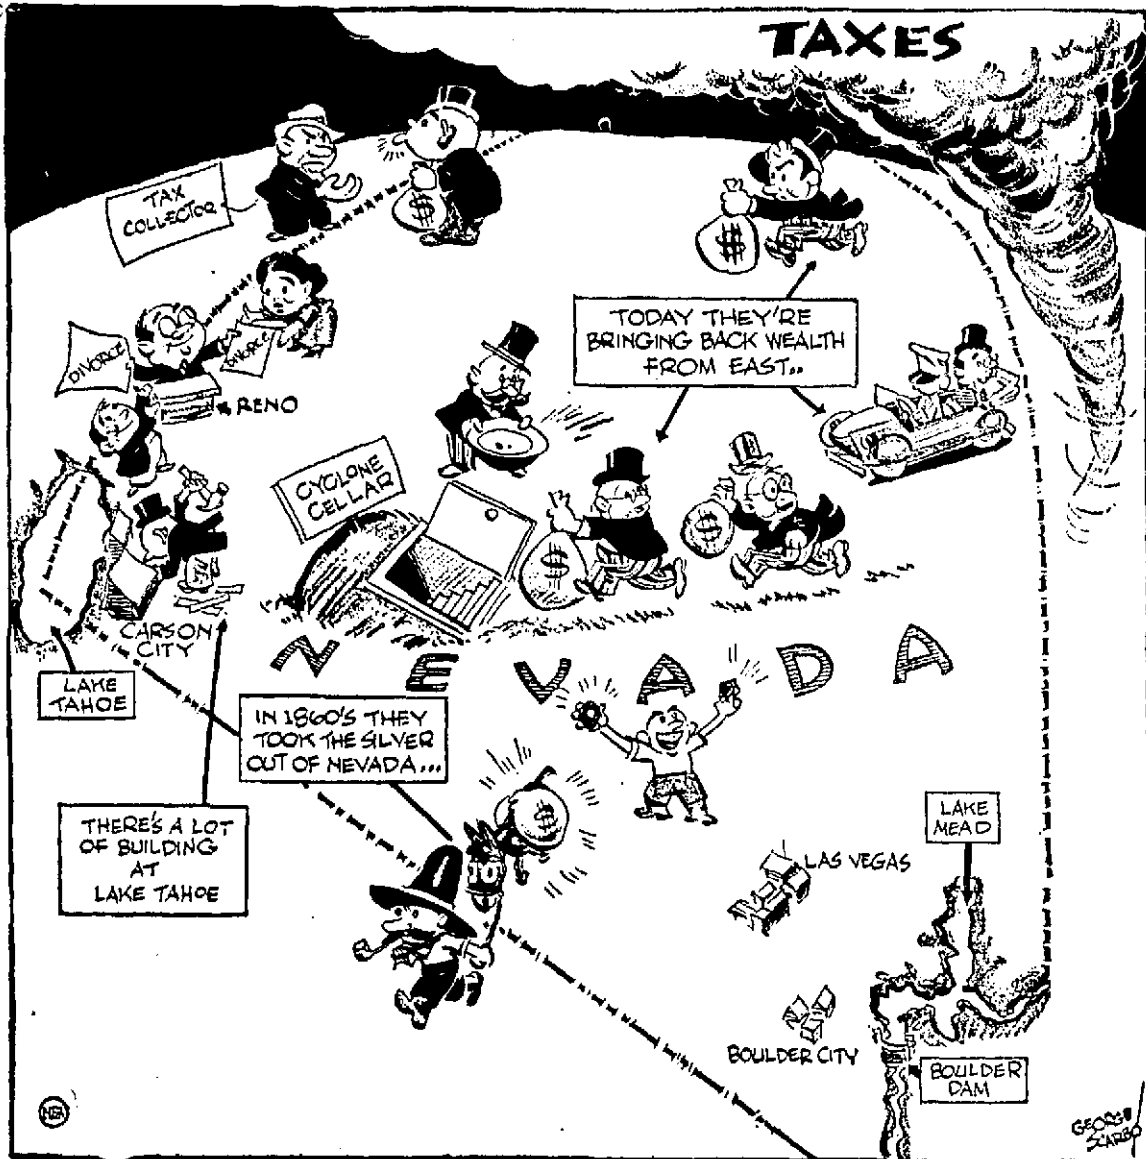

Elsmann's millions are now generally recognized as the first of many destined to find a congenial home in Nevada.

No Slip-Ups Here
Just over the mountains from Elsmann's home lies Lake Tahoe, much of whose shore-line is in Nevada. Now the sound of the hammer rings merrily out in this whole section as the new and elaborate homes rise.

Typical of the manner in which the most has been made of all these border-line matters, is Cal-Neva Lodge the local of Frank Bacon's famous play—character, "Lightnin'." Cal-Neva is built smack on the state line, and you have your residence there, too. But if you should wish to be in California, say to avoid a process-server, just cross the lobby into the dining room.

Nevada thinks of everything! There is Byron L. Sheppard, former partner in the firm of Sherman and Sheppard, from 1916 to 1920 South American distributors for Ford. Sheppard sold out and became a Wall Street operator. Sheppard came to Reno in 1931, bought a home, but it was not until very recently that his whereabouts and activities became generally known.

He had installed in his home a brokerage office for his own use.

N. Y. Yankees Drop 6th Straight Game

World Champs Blow Up and Tigers Score Nine Runs to Win

DETROIT.—(P)—The World Champion New York Yankees blew up in the eighth inning against Detroit Thursday, giving away nine runs on five hits, for their sixth straight setback, 10 to 6.

Atley Donald, the rookie right-hander who has won 10 without defeat this season started all the trouble but was not charged with the defeat. Although he pitched for eight hits in the first seven innings, he had a 4-to-1 yard when he loaded the bases with three walks and was removed in the eighth.

Johnny Murphy, the champions' reliever, was nicked for singles by pinch-hitters Rudy York and Roy Bell to let in three runs and was charged with the defeat. Marius Russo and Steve Sundra also were called in as Barney McCosky singled in a run, three more passes walked home two runs and Charley Gehring singled in another pair.

Archie McKain let the Yankees fill the sacks in the ninth on a walk and two hits, then forced in two runs with additional bases on balls and had to be relieved by Al Benton.

Altogether 18 walks were issued.

with the only direct stock-ticker market report in Nevada and a telephone connection with his brokers. He lived all those eight years in complete seclusion, allowing no visitors except the closest personal friends, opening his door every morning at 6 a. m. (9 a. m. Eastern time) and carrying on his large market operations quite unsuspected by Reno.

Buck Newsom started it by giving three in the first inning and two of them, linked with a single by Donald, and a double by Red Rolfe gave the Yanks two more runs in the seventh before Newsom was removed for a pinch-hitter.

Joe Gordon hit his 14th homer of the season off Luther Thomas in the eighth before the Tigers broke loose to make him the winning pitcher. A single and a double in the second gave the Tigers their only run off Donald.

The first telecast returns to be broadcast by radio were those announcing the election of President Harding in 1920.

Had, where productions like the Japanese Imperial Ballet, and the Polish Ballet, require a charge of 75c to $1.50—but for which the charge downtown in New York would be $2.75 to $3.50.

Nor is the report true that there are no "girl" shows at the Fair. Mr. Washburn said there were about a dozen burlesque houses, not to mention a long run of cabaret entertainments—and most of them hard back to old-fashioned days, such as George Jessel's troupe in the concession "In Old New York," which goes by the name, "Gaieties of 1900."

William C. Page of the Soil Conservation Service was introduced Friday as a new member of Rotary.

Program chairman was C. C. Spragins.

If we are ever going to walk with Christ, we must learn to walk with men.—Rev. Dr. Eugene C. Carder, of New York's Riverside Church.

How to Murder Dandelions

Have you a bumper crop of those pesky yellow flowers on your lawn? Try the water-white kerosene treatment, perfected by A. H. Post of the agricultural experiment station at Bozeman, Mont. Kerosene is sprayed on grass the previous fall; picture shows what happens. Caution: only water-white kerosene, please. Colored kerosene will kill dandelions, okay—and the grass with them.

Thomas to Submit

naires rallied behind the program and if they were unable to donate money to the building fund they volunteered with gifts of livestock, poultry or any other farm commodity that could be sold on the market.

"If they didn't have this to donate, they volunteered a week's labor on the building. We also had to float a few bonds, which were later paid off at a discount and the building freed of debt," Mr. Ellen said.

McFaddin Speaker

E. F. McFaddin told the group that the legion needed such a building program to create interest among legionnaires and other ex-service men. With the completion of such a proposed building, it would hold the legion together for another 20 years.

"I believe there is some way we could obtain aid through the federal government for the building program an that this should be looked into at once. However, interest in this proposed building is growing and I believe it could be constructed without a penny from the government," Mr. McFaddin declared.

A Mr. Hill, substituting for Wayne Fletcher, head of the WPA in this section, told the group that it was now too late to receive aid from the federal government of a building sponsored by American Legion posts. Mr. Hill told of construction of legion buildings in other sections of the state several years ago—when federal aid was obtainable.

B. R. Hamm spoke briefly and expressed confidence that the legion post and the public would rally behind the building program when the financial drive gets underway. Mr. Hamm's motion calling for the appointment of a committee to draw up plans for the building was adopted. C. O. Thomas was then appointed chairman of the committee and is to submit plans for the building at a meeting to be announced within two or three weeks.

Leonard Ellis, managing editor of Hope Star, endorsed the idea of a "community center" to be used by various organizations, and promised the co-operation of the newspaper in a publicity campaign.

T. S. Cornelius, general chairman of the building committee, told of various ways that the building could be financed. He suggested that before any campaign is launched that legionnaires and other interested persons approve plans for the building which will be submitted within two or three weeks.

Others attending the meeting Thursday night and who expressed confidence that financial arrangements could be made were M. S. Bates, R. P. Bowen, C. E. Cassidy, Robert Wilson, and Leo Robins.

be a flat one, subject to change should competitive conditions warrant. A rate of between $6.25 and $10 per bale has been suggested. It would apply to any cotton, whether produced this year or in the past. Garner Tullis, representing the New Orleans Cotton Exchange, declared that a proposed flexible subsidy date would destroy American future markets, and prevent hedging.

Officials indicated that the announcement of the subsidy program might be made next week.

The revival campaign will begin Sunday night, July 23, at 8 o'clock and will continue for several days. The pastor and the membership of the Hinton Methodist church invites the public.

difference is that they have to work longer to get it. The ironic part about it is that whereas the other changes in the WPA bill were made over the administrations' objection, this particular change was made with Administrator Harrington's full approval.

The prevailing wage rule, as Harrington saw it, resulted in inefficiency in WPA building projects; a foreman on a given job might have one crew putting in 60 hours a week, another crew doing 75 another doing 90, and still another doing 110. Under those circumstances, he was likely to have a terrible time getting his job done smoothly.

In addition, Harrington felt that the prevailing wage rule paved the way for a good deal of chiseling. There were cases in which a relief worker, enjoying a high hourly pay rate, would finish his weekly WPA stint in 15 hours and would use his spare time to get a part-time job somewhere else, so that his total earnings came to more than many workers in WASHINGTON.—(P)—House leaders agreed Friday to take up compromise wage and hour amendments designed to remove certain farm and white-collar workers from the operation of the law.

They decided that unless the labor committee approves revisions in a day or two the rules committee would be asked to send them to the floor for debate anyway.

South's Non-Believers May Squawk

At any rate, WPA has its hands full of trouble now, and expects that the trouble it will get next fall will make the present difficulties look mild. For, as one official expressed it, if thousands of relief workers angrily strike because they have to work more hours but still get just as much money, what aren't they likely to do when they find that their pay will be cut too?

A three-back from the non-relief people in the south is perfectly possible, too, for WPA figures that in some sections of the south, under the new rule, relief pay will actually be higher than the pay scale in private industry. If that happens, energetic action by some of the very congressmen who voted the new rule into effect can be looked for.

Just to make the September horizon look worse, at the same time that the pay cuts go into effect all WPA workers who have been on the rolls for 18 months or more must be laid off for 30 days without pay.

All in all, the WPA high command isn't looking forward to the autumn with any noticeable degree of enthusiasm.

Forest fires in the United States averaged 172,000 a year in the five years from 1933 to 1937 inclusive.
